

Microblading Patch Test:

The anaesthetic and pigment will be tested for sensitivity. The skin will be superficially pricked behind your ears and the anesthetic and pigment will be applied to the skin. After 24-48 hours your skin should be checked to see if there's any reaction.

If there is no reaction - no itching, redness, swelling or irritation, then it is safe to proceed with the treatment. Should you experience any of the above, the please clean the area of product immediately and contact the studio to advise of the results.

- If there is no reaction, then you can go ahead with the procedure, as discussed. During your pre-treatment consultation, the correct color pigment will be mixed to check for the desired look and this will become the pigment patch test.
